Delphian Gallery is proud to present 'Some Pieces of Mind', Bertrand Fournier's debut solo show in the UK.

Born in 1985 in Île-de-France, Fournier began painting in his early 30s. What started out as a hobby alongside his job as a nurse in a psychiatric infirmary—became a compulsive artistic obsession. He has since achieved astronomical success, both online, and in physical galleries.

Fournier reconfigures organic forms into grander linear statements on untreated linen canvas. He flirts between abstraction and symbolism, figuration and minimalism. Bold combinations of bright colours are synthesised into disorderly settings as a deliberate gesture to celebrate the beauty of imperfection.

We invite you to join us in viewing the original artworks of this incredibly exciting artist who has only been exhibiting since 2017.

Private view drinks sponsored by Crate Brewery.

Delphian Gallery

Delphian Gallery is an artist-run peripatetic contemporary art gallery, appearing at different locations in London and internationally to host their exhibitions. 'Delphian', (stemming from Delphi, the ancient oracle of Apollo) meaning 'obscurely prophetic' aims to be just that, giving a platform to varying work from exciting, esoteric talent.

The gallery aims to showcase the most captivating and challenging work by emerging and early career artists to their audience of art lovers, artists, collectors and patrons. Past exhibitions have included solo shows from Florence Hutchings and Carson Lancaster as well as large scale group exhibitions. Last year they launched their inaugural open call competition which attracted over 8000 entries from around the world.
